Visionaries plan our cities, design and build the edifices and public spaces that give them form, and engineer the infrastructure that keeps it all working. The building industry plays an essential role in meeting the needs of our ever-evolving society through their efforts, and the National Building Museum honors and celebrates these professions by sharing their achievements, innovations and impact with national audiences.

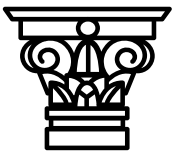

An inspired coalition of private companies, trade associations and labor unions saved our historic home and established the Museum more than four decades ago. To this day, building industry partners continue to support and shape the exhibitions and programs experienced by 500,000 visitors each year.

Under the umbrella of the Capital Society membership program, the Museum provides a forum for corporate and association professionals to:

- Offer thought-leadership that guides conversations on the innovations and emerging trends that impact the built environment.
- Network and connect with stakeholders from the industries shaping our built world, including architecture, design, engineering, urban planning, landscape architecture and construction.
- Shape the next generation of building industry professionals.
- Engage employees with tangible benefits, including access to the Museum's exhibitions, programs and corporate team-building events.

With membership levels ranging from $1,000 to $25,000, the Capital Society offers valuable benefits for every organization. At every level, members have the opportunity to provide additional support that serves the Museum through exclusive customized engagement—including exhibition sponsorship, support for educational programming, and, at the Capital Council level, the possibility of joining the Board of Trustees. Our membership team provides dedicated customer service and is committed to helping members leverage their benefits.

The world we design and build is integral to our shared future. Membership in the Capital Society demonstrates your organization's commitment to creating a better future for all of us. We invite you to join the ongoing conversation at the National Building Museum.
